CALL FOR PAPERS

Bioethics Education in Central-Eastern Europe

Edited by Dragana Ignjatovic Ristic

Clinical Center Kragujevac
School of Medicine, Serbia

We invite submissions for an edited collection that will focus on bioethics education in Central-Eastern Europe. The purpose of this collection is to bring together scholars and researchers who are interested in exploring the most pressing issues related to bioethics education in this region.

Central-Eastern Europe has a unique history and cultural background, which has led to specific bioethical challenges in the field of education. The collection aims to address these challenges by providing a comprehensive and interdisciplinary analysis of bioethics education in this region.

Proposed topics

We are interested in papers that address any aspect of bioethics education in Central-Eastern Europe. Topics may include, but are not limited to:

- The role of bioethics education in promoting ethical practices in healthcare
- The ethical challenges of biotechnology education
- The impact of cultural and religious beliefs on bioethics education
- The intersection of bioethics education and human rights
- The challenges of teaching bioethics in a multilingual and multicultural environment
- The use of case studies and simulations in bioethics education

We welcome submissions from scholars and researchers across various disciplines, including but not limited to bioethics, philosophy, law, and education. We encourage submissions that provide new insights into bioethics education in Central-Eastern Europe and propose innovative approaches to addressing the challenges that arise in this field.
